COMING HOME.

Mr. Alexander Says Winter Herring Fishery is Practically Over.

A cablegram was received at the state department, Washington, yesterday, dated at Birchy Cove, Newfoundland, from Mr. A. B. Alexander as follows:

"The herring fishing practically ended. Will probably leave for Gloucester tonight."

Mr. Alexander is the fish commission expert, who has just concluded his third annual tour of observation of the operations of the American fishing vessels in Newfoundland waters. He has been aboard the revenue cutter Gresham, his function being to warn American fishermen against infractions of the local fishing laws, while safe-guarding their interests at all points. Incidentally he is making a careful study of the whole general subject of the herring fishing as a preliminary step to the consideration before The Hague tribunal of rights of American fishermen in Newfoundland waters.

BIG LOT OF SALT.

Over 32,000 Tons Brought to This Port Last Year.

While Gloucester cannot be accused of being a fresh place, still it needed a lot of salt to save its chief product, for no less than 32,000 tons of salt were brought here in 1907, the most of it coming from Trapani and Iviza in ten large steamers.

MUCH NEEDED FROST.

Struck In This Week at the Bay of Islands, N. F.

Some of the Fleet Now Coming with Frozen Fares.

Advices received today from Bay of Islands, N. F., are to the effect that there had been a good frost and that several vessels loaded, while others did well.

Some of the vessels have sailed for home and it is understood that some others are nearly ready.

A letter from one of the skippers, dated Sunday, at Bay of Island, says that the little cold spurt of last week petered out and wound up Saturday and Saturday night with a drizzling rain. On Sunday morning the rain ceased and the thermometer dropped to the freezing point. Then the wind hauled to north west, with snow squalls. Later in the day the thermometer took another drop several degrees.

On Sunday there were enough herring on the scaffolds to load, or finish loading quite a few of the vessels and all were praying for frost to hold.

Evidently, since this letter was written, the much needed frost came and stayed for a day or so, at least.

The Br. sch. Glenwood, with 600 barrels frozen herring and 626 barrels salt herring, consigned to J. A. Farquhar & Co., arrived at Halifax on Tuesday.

The British sch. Renown, with frozen herring, under charter to the Gorton-Pew Fisheries Co. of this port, and bound here, was also at Halifax on Tuesday.

Nearly 5,500 Arrivals at This Port in 1907.

Boarding Officer O'Brien Reports Breakwaters Appreciated.

At present, at the wharves of the inner harbor, there are 100 fishing vessels of all kinds hauled up.

About 1200 vessels of all kinds sought shelter during the year on the anchorage ground in the shelter of Dog Bar breakwater.

The boarding officer's figures show that 15 vessels was the average number of daily arrivals here for the year 1907.

NATURAL FROST HERRING.

New Sch. Arethusa Home Today With the First Cargo.

Capt. Morrissey Reports Moderate Head Wind Passage Home.

Sch. Arethusa, Capt. Clayton Morrissey, arrived from Bay of Island, N. F., at 7 o'clock this morning with a big cargo, 900 barrels of frozen herring and 900 barrels of salt herring.

This is the maiden trip of this large and fine craft, which is of the knockabout type and is also the first trip of Capt. Morrissey for the firm of Cunningham & Thompson, with whom he is now associated.

The Arethusa brings the first natural frost herring of the season from Bay of Islands.

Capt. Morrissey reports leaving Bay of Islands on December 27, a week ago last Friday, in company with sch. Alice R. Lawson and three Nova Scotia crafts, one of them sch. Renown, chartered by the Gorton-Pew Fisheries Co. of this port. This craft had frozen herring and the Lawson had salt herring. The other two Nova Scotia craft were bound to Halifax with frozen and salt herring.

Light westerly head winds were encountered all the way home, so the passage was a moderate uneventful one.

There was no chance to "try" the new craft on the trip home, but going down, in November, considerable windy, rough weather was encountered and the craft showed some great sailing and weatherly qualities. Capt. Morrissey is delighted with her and told a Times representative this morning, "she's a dandy."

REINDEER FOR GRENFELL.

St. Johns, Jan. 4.—Steamer Anita, bringing 300 reindeer from Norway for the use of Dr. Grenfell, the physician-missionary explorer, has sought a harbor off the northern coast of Newfoundland, having been unable to reach her destination, St. Anthony, Labrador, where Grenfell maintains a hospital, owing to the prevalence of ice floes. The reindeer are in excellent condition.
